THE SKYLARK.
Bird of the wilderness,
Whimsical and unbusiness,
Sweet by the main o'er moorland and leaf
Emblem of happiness
Best is thy dwelling place—
O to abide in the desert with thee!
What is the lay of the land,
Pae in the downy cloud,
Lena gives it energy, love gave it birth;
Where on thy dewy wing,
Where art thou journeying?
Thou art in heaven, thy love is on earth.
Overhill and fountain shewn,
Over moor and mountain green,
Over the red streamer that heralds the day,
Over the cloudlet dim,
Over the rainbow's rim,
Mystical cherub, soar, singing away!
Then when the gloaming comes,
Low in the heather blooms,
Sweet will thy welcome and bed of love be.
Emblem of happiness
Best is thy dwelling place—
O to abide in the desert with thee!

Fine Position in Million Dollar Bank

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, Feb. 12.—From a society woman who had never done a stroke of work as a wage earner until 12 years ago, Mrs. William Laimbeer has advanced to a position in the National City Bank of New York, where she will have charge of all business done by the bank with women.
She went into business after her husband, a Wall Street broker, was killed in an automobile accident and the responsibility of caring for her three children was thrust upon her. She began in a position little above that of a clerkship and steadily advanced to the rank of executive in the first billion dollar commercial bank in America.
She was formerly Nathalie Schneck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Schneck of New York and New Port. Mrs. Laimbeer is the first woman to become an officer of the National City Bank. Her rise has broken a century old tradition.

Anniversary Dinner at Cherry Hill

Madames Wayne Smith, Edward Hilderman, Will Cadell, T. E. Kenney, W. R. Parker and H. H. Heinze were entertained at dinner yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Osborne at Cherry Hill in honor of the twenty-fourth wedding anniversary of the host and hostess. A most tempting dinner was served and a happy day was enjoyed.

Young Ladies' Missionary Society to Meet

The Young Ladies' Missionary society of St. Paul's Lutheran church will hold their regular meeting at the church Tuesday, Feb. 17, at 8 o'clock. The hostess is Mrs. George Pitzer and Mrs. Sumner Wilson.

Latent Eye Trouble

So many school children have latent eye trouble that a test for vision is a wise precaution.
Hard school work aggravates defects in vision, retards them in their studies and may work a permanent injury.
Our careful examination will disclose any trouble.

Menus for a Family

Breakfast—Stewed figs, cereal, thin cream, plain omelet, broiled bacon, whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.
Luncheon—Minute rarebit, hearts of celery, brown bread and butter, canned peaches, devil's food cake, milk, tea.

Dinner—Stewed chicken, mashed potatoes, gravy, buttered onions, asparagus salad, steamed graham pudding, baking powder biscuits, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.
Children under ten years of age should not be allowed to eat baking powder biscuits and gravy for their dinner, as this delectable dish is not easily digested by juvenile tummies.

Plain Omelet.

Five eggs, 4 tablespoons milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter.
Break eggs into mixing bowl and beat slightly. Add milk and part of the butter and beat just enough to mix. Heat frying pan, add butter and turn pan until thoroughly coated with melted butter. When very hot pour in the egg mixture. As the omelet cooks, lift with a fork, letting the uncooked part run into the pan. When the whole is soft and creamy add salt and pepper. Brown quickly on the bottom, roll and turn onto a hot platter. Serve at once.

Minute Rarebit.

Two cups milk, 3 tablespoons minute tapioca, 1 1/2 cups diced cheese, 1 egg, 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, paprika.
Scald milk in double boiler and add tapioca. Cook, stirring to prevent sticking for 15 minutes. Add cheese, salt, mustard and paprika. Cook, stirring constantly until cheese is melted. Add egg well beaten with 2 tablespoons cold milk. Remove from heat and serve immediately on toast.

Devil's Food Cake.
One cup sugar, 1/2 cup butter, two squares bitter chocolate, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 1/2 cups flour, measured after sifting, 2 eggs (yolks), 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1/2 teaspoon salt.
Cream butter and sugar. Melt chocolate in 1/2 cup milk and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add to creamed butter and sugar. Beat yolks of eggs in 1/2 cup milk. Mix and sift flour, soda and salt. Add vanilla to liquid mixture and add this alternately with flour to first mixture. Turn into oiled and floured pans and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.
Put together with boiled icing made with the whites of the eggs.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—Won't Spatter.

When frying, add a little salt to the fat and the croquets or doughnuts will not spatter on the stove.

Better Vegetables.
Vegetables are more easily digested if they are served hot with butter sauces than cold with vinegar.

Rabbits in Salt.
After rabbits are cleaned and cut into parts they should soak in cold salt water an hour before being cooked.

Pork Chops.
Pork chops are most delicious served with slices of apple half an inch thick, fried in the same pan with the chops.

Cooking Oysters.
Oysters should be cooked as little as possible, never after they begin to shrivel.

Cook Duck Longer.
Duck requires more cooking than turkey or chicken and needs plenty of water in the pan to start with if an open pan is used.

Sea Food Spoils.
All sea food spoils easily and should be kept very cold and be used as soon after catching as possible.

Baked Potatoes.
Baked potatoes will always be mealy

if the ends are nipped off before putting them in the oven.

Says Women Fear to Disobey Fashion

New York, Feb. 14.—Most women are cowards in their manner of dress, Margaret Story, the lecturer on dress economy, said in an interview today. She stated that women as a rule are not brave enough to flout the edicts of fashion and express their own personalities through the medium of their clothes, rather than the ideas of a modiste.
"The difficulty," Mrs. Story said, "is the women are not brave enough to express themselves in their clothes."

DINNER GOWN OF CHIFFON

A sumptuous dinner gown of black chiffon with an entire overskirt of exquisite lace is this new creation.

But that is coming, and more rapidly than many suspect. When all women do express their tastes, their principles and their souls in what they wear, society will be full of charm and fashion will not supersede women. "Charm isn't dependent on clothes as so many people seem to think. Charm lies in being one's self. Not that clothes aren't important. But it is the other way round. They are important as an expression of charm and individuality. It seems to be a greater compliment to have some one say to me, 'That hat looks just like you' than to say 'Isn't that a pretty hat?'"

"Dress is leaning more to simplicity. Fashion is following the lead. This must sooner or later lead the height of art in dress, for the quality of simplicity is recognized immediately as sincerity, which is the very essence of charm."

Valentine Party Was Most Successful

The Valentine Masquerade, given by the Royal Neighbors in Union hall Wednesday evening was a great success. The floor was filled with merry dancers in costume, there were clowns galore, there were gypsies, dancing girls, witches, farmers, etc. Then there were the two colored ladies and gentlemen who had come to the ball, and the spry old lady with the lace parasol, and many pretty valentine girls, every one felt sorry for the forlorn "young lady" who couldn't find a beau.

The prize for the handsomest lady's costume was won by Mrs. Lee Lambert and E. Frank Dickerson won the prize for the handsomest costume for gentlemen. The prize for the funniest ladies' costume was awarded to Mrs. Besse Pearce and the prize for the funniest costume for men, to Jack Pearce.

The hall was lined with spectators and everyone had a most delightful time. The committee served ice and waters, completing the enjoyment of everyone.

Annual Banquet of Neighbourly Class

The Neighbourly Class of the Methodist Sunday school held its seventeenth annual banquet at the church on the evening of Lincoln's birthday anniversary. The banquet room was beautifully decorated. Some of the flowers employed in decorating were sent by Mrs. Floto from California.

Mrs. Margaret Floto being a member of the class before going west, to live. More than seventy-five were seated at the sumptuous repast, served by the True Blue class of the Sunday school. Following this a short but interesting program was enjoyed, including a letter from Mrs. Margaret Floto from California, read by the president of the class, A. E. Taylor; the Neighbourly Class Sextette sang "Illinois." The sextette is composed of Mesdames Mary Anderson, Elnyre, Mason, Messrs. Henry Hintz, Henry Floto and Van Elnyre. Mrs. Albertine McKenney gave two readings, "Mr. Brown's Letter," and "The Two Deacons," which were much enjoyed.

Short talks were given by Mayor Frank D. Palmer, R. C. Caughey, Attorney E. E. Wingert, L. B. Neighbour and Rev. A. S. Moore, pastor of the church, and Wilbur Courtright, assistant superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mrs. McKenney then gave another enjoyable double number, "When Our Minister Comes to Tea," and "May Time Music."

And last, but not least was a most scholarly and inspiring address by Dr. A. H. Burr, teacher of the Neighbourly class, in memory of Abraham Lincoln's birthday, celebrated yesterday. It was such a splendid address that the Telegraph hopes to print the speech in a few days.

CAUSES OF DIVORCE.

Jazz music, the movies, radio, golf and the hurried pace of life generally—these are not the principal causes of divorce, according to Judge Thomas F. Graham of California, whose views on the subject are not to be scorned as he has granted more divorces than any other judge in the country. One a day for twenty-four years is his record.

Nor is it the heedless flapper, looking upon marriage as a bit of a thrill to be taken lightly, the most frequent principal in divorce, the judge tells. The older woman with the straggly hair out-numbers the bobbed-haired in his court. Any flapper can flap all she wants, provided she feeds her husband well and "jollies him along," according to this jurist. Good food dished up to the man saves the home. It is an old adage, the judge believes in it.

Judge Graham, while he believes a uniform divorce law would be a good thing, declares divorce is going to continue and that it is wrong not to permit the mismatched to go their separate ways. He puts it this way:

"As long as man takes after Adam and woman takes after Eve the world is going to be filled with unhappy people," Judge Graham says. "When men and women are temperamentally unsuited it is almost a crime to compel them to live together. If you could search the hearts of the people who seek divorce in the great number of cases you would find that another man or woman is involved. They have drawn a blank, as the saying goes, and seek such relief as the law can give them."

"I should advise people to marry young. They come to grief less often than when they have long engagements. In answer to the critics who aver that women are inviting trouble when they continue to work after marriage, I must say that I have only had two wives of this class sued for divorce in the course of nearly 9,000 cases."

"There is bound to be more and more divorce. It is inevitable and it is a mistake to make the laws too rigid, although I do believe there should be corroborative evidence in every case. I should say that in eight out of twelve cases there is collusion when divorce is sought on the grounds of cruelty and desertion."

Although he has sundered the marriage ties in such a vast number of cases, Judge Graham shows a brighter side of the picture when he makes known that he has reunited 2,000 unhappy men and women, who found divorce wasn't the thing they wanted.

A GAIN.

Don't be too fatalistic about cancer. In Pennsylvania 13 years of educational work have cut down the average time, between discovery of first symptoms in superficial cancer and first call on the doctor, from 18 months to 14.6 months.

That's 20 per cent. In cases of deep-seated cancer the interval has been reduced nearly one-half.

All over the country people are applying more promptly than they used to for medical aid, and physicians are applying proper treatment with less delay.

Compared with progress made in combating other diseases, this may seem a feeble accomplishment. But don't worry, science yet will conquer cancer.

WARNINGS.

Nature looks after us. She will not permit anything that would make us live longer than she intends. But she does want us to live on her intended time.

As cities become larger and more congested, their residents' health averages worse. Epidemics may be prevented, but the "all in" or half-in feeling multiplies. A man can be 50 per cent dead and still not be statistically sick.

Quite obviously, nature is attacking the city man's health to warn him to get out where he was intended to live—close to nature. The airplane will make escape possible.

KILLERS.

One Indian in every five, on reservations in our country, has tuberculosis or trachoma, a medical association learns.

Nevertheless, the full-blooded Indian population is increasing steadily. Disease doesn't matter as much as the power of resistance—the body's ability to fight and hold in check invading germs. The Indians, attacked by diseases brought by the white man, are more than holding their own because they live in the healthful outdoors. Confine them in cities and one generation would virtually wipe them out.

Health is out in the fresh air and quiet.

RESULTS.

Bankers express worry because it's estimated that 400 million dollars are hidden away behind the clock and similar places by hoarders who do not trust banks. This money should be working and earning more for its owners, incidentally creating jobs.

But for every $1 hoarded, $46 are banked as savings deposits. Behold, here, the result of educational campaigns conducted by bank advertising in newspapers. Hoarding and fear of banks were common a generation ago. Now they are exceptional.

No man reaches the end of his rope until it burns his nose. Some men in the public eye too much feel like a cinder.

TOM SIMS SAYS:

There might be more divorces if a woman could smell her husband's breath over the telephone.

In Boston, a bandit shot a man after robbing him, which, we believe, is absolutely contrary to burglar union laws.

Just to show how scarce marrying men are, in Nyack, N. Y., a woman married the same man twice.

This fever in Alaska is terrible, but it won't kill as many men as the gold fever did.

About 40 gallons of beer found on a Dutch ship was dumped overboard but it's a long time before summer.

Only a few more cussing days before Congress adjourns.

Chicago man got six months for stealing $10,000 which is good pay even for stealing.

Yale professor finds the cost of living has advanced two points, but it is still worth the price.

There is probably no truth in the rumor that Japan proposes to impose on foreigners desiring to own land in Japan whatever conditions their countries impose on Japanese, but there could be no criticism if it were done. In fact, there could be no complaint if Japan were to enact exact duplicate of the American immigration law.

For that matter, American states might repeal their alien land laws in the exact manner Japan has done. There is an old alien land law in Japan, which has been ostensibly repealed. 1. That the repeal shall not be effective until proclaimed by Imperial rescript (which has never been done).

2. That the privilege of land owning shall then extend only to nationals of countries which grant the like privilege to Japanese.

3. That is shall not apply to the island of Hokkaido, nor to any of the other parts of Japan where there is any land available, nor to any territory which has been or may be designated as a military district. 4. Nor shall all except by authorization of the home secretary.

With these exceptions, the alien land law of Japan is hereby repealed!

BYRANITES HAVE A NEW TARGET

The Byranites will have to excommunicate the Episcopal church or at least the Chicago diocese, Bishop Anderson lauded evolution, and declared fundamentalism "out of date."

Doubtless the good bishop would concede the title of Christian to these "out-of-daters" which they deny to him. It depends on good deal on whether you judge Christianity by theological conformity or by Christian charity.

HOW CO-OPERATION SAVES CROPS

Students of agriculture co-operation will do well to note the latest step of the California raisin growers, who have had, probably, a longer experience in co-operation than any other farmers in America.

So many vineyards have been planted in the raisin district that in a good year they can produce more raisins than the country will eat. Even a small surplus may depress the market ruinously to the growers, while cheapening raisins to the consumer scarcely at all.

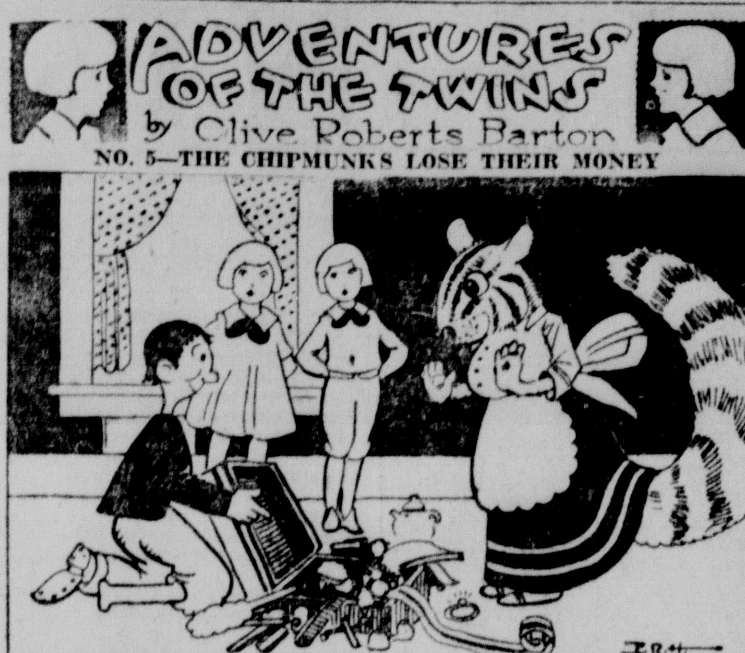

So the organized growers, now a highly-capitalized company, with huge packing plants and distribution system, put experts to work to find an outlet for the surplus. They have devised a way of making high-class syrup from the excess raisins, and now the growers will erect a factory and go into the syrup business.

The will be raisins for sale to whoever wants to buy raisins, in whatever quantity the market will take—and no more. All the rest will go on the market in the form of another, non-competing food. Thus a problem is solved by co-operation which could never have been solved by separate effort, whether by growers or packers.

WORLD COURT ON THE SHIELD

As expected, the world court is shelved for the session. Under existing methods, there would have been no possibility of action within the time that we should have something else too—that is, the fiction that there is, or ever has been any such thing as "party government" or "party responsibility" in this country.

Here is a policy endorsed, not merely by the dominant party, but by both parties; urged by the president and promised by the platform—and yet it cannot be done at this session, and it is by no means certain even at the

"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Chipmunk. "I do wish I was rich."

Mister Peg Leg and Nancy and Nick sat in Mrs. Chipmunk's parlor with all the things spread out on the floor; all the things that Mister Peg Leg carried in his peddler pack.

Mrs. Chipmunk was so excited she picked up first one thing and then another.

"What a beautiful fan!" she exclaimed. "Isn't it lovely! It would exactly match my new black and orange dress."

"And what a lovely mat! It would do for a center piece on my table to put under my gramophone, or on the back of my big plush chair."

"And what a pretty dish! It would do finely for pickles, or I could use it on my bureau to put pins in. How much is it, Mister Peg Leg?"

Mrs. Chipmunk admired everything and asked the price. There was a silk apple pin-cushion, and a picture and a clock and a silk shawl and a shiny kettle and some beads and handkerchiefs and a dish mop and handkerchiefs and everything almost.

"I do wish I was rich! Chirk and I have a little money saved up in the tea pot on the mantle for a rainy day but we agreed not to use it."

"Why don't you ask Mister Chipmunk?" said Nick who was very anxious for the little peddler man to get enough money to buy a new pig leg. His old one was worn off so awfully.

"That's a good idea!" declared Mrs. Chipmunk. "He's out doing the lunch dishes in the kitchen. He always does them on washing day." But no Chirk was to be found. There was the kitchen just as she had left it—the dishes all piled up in the sink. And no sign of her husband.

"The very idea!" she exclaimed. "Then I'll just take some money out of the tea pot without asking. Its mine anyway for I've saved it."

But lo and behold! The tea pot was empty!

Mrs. Chipmunk rushed back to the parlor. "I can't buy anything," she cried. "The money has disappeared and so has my husband."

"That's too bad!" sighed Mister Peg Leg starting to gather up all his things again, Nancy and Nick helping him.

"But it's not your fault, Mrs. Chipmunk," he said. "And don't be too hard on your husband. Something may have happened."

Just as they were leaving who should come rushing in but Chirk Chipmunk himself.

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" he called. "It's my wife's birthday and I want to buy her a present. I've been out earning the money."

"What's that?" Chirk Chipmunk gasped his wife. "You got that money right out of our tea pot. It's gone!"

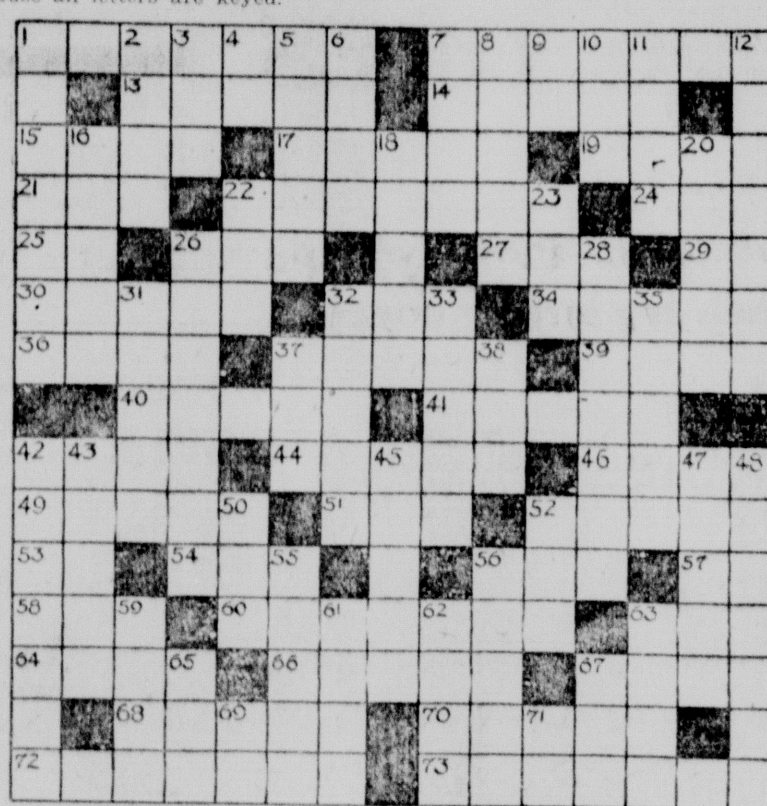

"What?" shrieked Chirk, rushing back to the dining room to have a look. "I never took a cent!"

next session. "Party responsibility" is a thing to aspire toward, in the future, not to be regretted, as an imaginary possession of the past.

PROGRESSIVES AND CONSERVATIVES

A lot of progressive having gone reactionary, the reactionaries now take up a progressive policy. It was the progressives who proposed the plan of having constitutional amendments ratified by the people, rather than by the legislatures, of the various states.

The purpose was to assure action not later than the next election, and to have that action directly by the people. Now the reactionaries, who do not believe in constitutional amendments at all, and make the same proposal with the hope that it would make ratification less likely.

For the present, they are doubtless right. The people, just now, are conservative. But they do not stay so, and when they are aroused, they will sometimes venture bolder steps than their representatives. The reactionaries may be hoist by their own petard. If they get their amendment adopted, they may find the cause, some day, of the very amendment they most fear.

this situation has influenced cancer is questionable.

"Cancer is far from a hopeless problem, however. As mortality from this malady has advanced, scientific knowledge concerning the disease has increased. While the exact cause of cancer is still veiled in mystery, the medical profession knows well enough its character. They know that cancer itself is not inherited; that it is not communicable; that it is not in the beginning a general disease. They know that early cancer is local and can be successfully removed by surgery or treated by radiation in many cases.

"Delay is the biggest difficulty in successfully treating cancer. Once the disease becomes general in the body, the case is hopeless. Giving nature a chance to stop a cancerous growth is foolish. Trying to stop it with nostrums demonstrates a pathetic ignorance of the disease and of therapeutics.

"Cancerous conditions include such things as obstinate sores, irritable warts or moles, abnormal bloody discharges and lumps or swellings in the breast. Such conditions deserve medical attention. A complete physical examination at least once yearly is the best possible means of controlling and preventing cancer as well as many other ailments."

SUPERCEDEAS IS GRANTED

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12.—A writ of supercedeas in the case of Conrad Blenz and Cal Anderson of Decatur, convicted of violating the state prohibition law, was granted by the supreme court this morning. Blenz was fined $200 and sentenced to one year in prison and Anderson fined $300 and sentenced to 120 days imprisonment.

CANCER IS THIRD IN DEATH DEALING DISEASES IN ILL.

One of Every Twelve Deaths in State is Caused By It.

Springfield, Ill. — Declaring that cancer is now a health problem of the first magnitude, Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health director, in a bulletin issued today, points out that the number of victims of this malady have tripled in Illinois during the last 20 years. From 2650 in 1905 the cancer fatalities jumped to 6566 in 1923. The death rate per 100,000 population grew from 51 to 98 during the two decades. Similar rises in mortality from this cause have been reported throughout the country.

"Cancer has risen in 20 years from seventh to third place among the most fatal of diseases," said the bulletin. "Twenty years ago 1 out of every 25 deaths was attributed to cancer. Now 1 out of each 12 is attributed to that cause. Any disease that demonstrates such aggressive vitality deserves special attention."

"Some increase in cancer mortality during the last quarter century was expected. It is essentially a disease of middle and later life, manifesting itself noticeably in people between 30 and 40 and reaching its highest fatal effects among those between 60 and 70. As childhood diseases have been controlled more and more effectively and the life span has increased, the diseases of later life logically have had greater opportunity. How much

FORCED ALL TO MARRY
 London—Every man of 21 and every girl of 18 was compelled to marry during the time of the ancient Incas in Peru, Senor Salomon, consul general here for Peru, says. The state gave every young man and woman a plot of land and laziness was punished by death.

LOVER LOST

Because weddings without bridegrooms aren't being done this year, southern California police are hunting Livingston Rowe, wealthy Hollywood broker who disappeared the day he was to have married Miss Cecyle A. Duncan, above. She fears he was abducted.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

THE SABBATH—GOD'S OPPORTUNITY
 Herodotus, the ancient Greek historian tells this story: Croesus, the last king of Lydia had a son who was dumb. When Sardis was attacked, and a Persian soldier rushed with drawn sword toward the king to take his life, this son sprang forward and exclaimed: "I pray you do not kill my father the king." The fear and anguish that gripped his being at sight of his father's danger overcame the impediment in his speech.
 If we have hitherto been dumb before the assaults made upon the sanctity of the Sabbath by worldly interests and the amusement-mad portion of society, existing conditions should loosen our tongues and cause us to cry out against the flagrant desecration of the day set aside and given by the Creator to His children as a day of rest and worship.
 To the normal human being the desire to worship and commune with God in instinctive. All peoples seek some higher power, a God, to whom they may offer income and to whom they may go for help in time of need. Man was created with eyes to look up toward God and His Heaven, and a soul to worship Him; he was also so created that in body and mind he needs rest and recreation and God has provided for all his needs. The Son of God Himself set us the example of worship. He went up into the Temple on the Sabbath day and worshipped as was His custom. We have six days in which to labor and to play. Shall we not then devote the Sabbath day to rest, to worship and to doing good according to our Lord's commandment and example? God has given us the Sabbath as our opportunity to gain physical, mental and spiritual refreshment and upbuilding. It was evidently not the divine purpose that man should so use that day that when he returns to his affairs on Monday he is worse physically or spiritually, instead of better. We can but wonder sometimes what manner of rest for body, mind or soul can be gained from the week-end parties, picnics, ball games, picture shows and similar diversions with which multitudes of people fill the Sabbath hours. In their mad race for physical enjoyment they miss the mark. The God given opportunity for physical and spiritual upbuilding is worse than wasted.

Then too, while we should not only improve to our highest advantage our own opportunities, should we not also refrain from doing those things which must necessarily prevent others from enjoying the same "happy privilege"? Many seek rest and recreation by patronizing and thus upholding institutions that not only make the Sabbath a day of amusement only but commercialize and degrade it. Under such conditions the Sabbath becomes distinctly an un-Christian and indeed, an un-American institution. The Creator and Ruler of the universe gave the commandment: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Will He hold guiltless those who deliberately trample upon His law? And will He not hold responsible in an even greater degree those who not only fail to revere His day but cause others to do so?

"But," says many, "I see no harm" in this or that amusement or recreation on the Sabbath. Possibly not for you under certain conditions. But what of the ultimate effect upon society if carried on in general? What of the effect upon our youth? He that caught one of these little ones to stumble it were better for him that a mill stone were tied about his neck and he cast into the sea" said the Christ, the Son of God.
 Traversing one of the principal streets of a large city on Sabbath morning, we saw on one side a man working on his new house; another working on his automobile; another working in his garden; another mowing his lawn. Farther on, amusement parks were in full operation and traffic of various kinds going on as usual. Truly may we say God and His law was "not in all their thoughts." Need we wonder that we have "crime waves" or that there is discord, unrest, jealousy, hatred and war? God's word declares that "the nation and kingdom that will not serve Him shall perish." The nations that have perished were those that forgot God and His law and went their own selfish sinful way to destruction. Shall America follow in their train?

"Where there is no vision the people perish." The Sabbath is a foundation stone in the Christian home, the Christian church and a Christian civilization. If we undermine the foundations can we expect the structure to stand firm?
 The Sabbath has come to us from remote antiquity, dropping honey upon the ages as it has come. Like the pillar of fire that went before the children of Israel in the desert, it has been the torch of God to light the way of the world. The Sabbath—God's opportunity to worship with man; God's opportunity to build up man; God's opportunity to teach man unselfishness and brotherhood; God's opportunity to uphold the sacredness of the home, the Church, and the State, may it ever abide and continue with us, and may we ever strive to make it a sacred and holy day as God would have us do.

"Nothing can be clearer to the intelligent observer of European life," than that a holiday Sabbath is a fruitful cause of physical, political and moral degradation to the masses of the people. A day of worldly pleasure for the rich, makes a day of toil for the dependent classes. An amount of labor is imposed on multitudes who need rest more than their employers—while those of whom toil is not made a necessity are tempted to waste money, time and health."
 Russell S. Cook,
 Calvin Coolidge, when Vice President of the United States was asked the question, "What does America need?" He replied, "What America needs is a continuing sense of obligation, a realization that a thing will not be right simply because it pays, but that a thing will pay simply because it is right. The supreme choice of the nation must not be the material forces which are temporal, but moral forces which are eternal."
 "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable, and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:
 Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."—Isaiah 58:13-14.

The Season's Greatest Novel of Marriage

"The Golden Bed"

By WALLACE IRWIN

Produced as a Paramount picture by CECIL B. DEMILLE from a screen adaptation by Jeanie Macpherson with Rod LaRocque, Vera Reynolds, Lillian Rich, Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye in featured roles.

(Copyright, 1924, by Famous Players-Lasky Corp.)

FORTY-FIFTH INSTALLMENT

He allowed his coffee to cool, drank it at a gulp and went to the veranda where he finished two strong cigars before making up his mind to approach Flora Lee. The clock on the stairs had just struck nine when he went to her room.

She was propped up in bed, slipping smoke through a long ivory holder and reading the Evening Democrat.

"Admah," she drawled, her eyes on the page, "do you know that the Fincheater Stock Farms are for sale? The advertisement doesn't say why, but I think it's because of the trouble with the horses."

"What's the trouble with the horses?" she asked.

"Ham and sausages," grunted Admah, then feeling that he should be more genteel with a sick woman, "I don't know an awful lot about horses."

"But you could learn, Old Goose!" she cried.

Like a diver, perched above some uninviting tide, he chose this instant for this plunge.

"Flora Lee," he began huskily, "I know you come from the sporting country."

"What do you mean by that?" The paper fell to the floor.

"Well, about luck. You're a thoroughbred, used to chances. I'm just an old plough horse. Now I'm in a fix where I thought maybe you could give me a little boost."

"What sort of fix do you mean?" He was sorry he had spoken, for her look had become strained and he knew that it was not strong.

"Oh, it's all right," he went on, attempting to be light. "Only that bracelet I gave you for your birthday."

"What's the matter with it?" she asked sharply.

"Nothin'. Only it ain't paid for."

"But our credit?"

"That's the trouble," he interrupted. "Cummings wants cash for it or he wants it back right away."

"That poor white?" she laughed scornfully. "Why, we've been dealing with him as long as I can remember. Has he lost his mind?"

"I reckon so," said Admah dully. "But if he don't get cash he'll make trouble. And I can't afford any more trouble right now. The annual election's tomorrow and I've got to come through clean."

"Why don't you pay for it and hush Cummings up?" she asked, and through the rift in his illusion he saw how worn and old she could look.

"Oh, well," he said gently, rising to leave the room. "I oughtn't to bother you. It was a birthday present."

"Admah!" she called so shrilly after him that he faced about and saw the panic in her eyes. "Admah, is it as bad as that? You can't afford to pay? You have to send things back? People won't trust you?"

"Just about," he told her plainly. "We've been paid an awful price. Flora Lee. We could have pulled through if stocks had held up. But they're down. If we keep this house and I keep my job—"

"Your job?" She clutched at the detestable hounds on her French coverlid, and even in his excitement Admah realized how he hated those embroidered beasts. But she was asking almost in a shriek, "What do you mean by that?"

"Hush," he begged, and resumed on a soothing tack. "I'll keep my job all right. But we've got to pay pretty low for a year or so. Fire a lot of the help. Cut out style and flin's—"

"So that's what you've done to me!" She crouched forward, muscles tense, studying him with loveless eyes.

"Flora Lee, honey!" he begged, suddenly crushed by her scorn. He reached out toward her, but she cringed away.

"You've played my shabby little trick and got me to marry you. And I was fool enough—"

"You wanted my money, you mean?" He growled this suddenly, resentful, desperate, ashamed.

"Yes. And where is it? Do you think I'd have looked at you twice if I'd thought you were a fool?"

"Struggling to believe his senses he found himself mumbling about his money: 'I never was rich, if that's what you thought.'"

"You went swanking around with every pretense of it—of course I believed it—do you think I'd have considered you? I'd have had my servants boot you out of the house."

"Flora Lee!" It came like the blow of a wounded animal, half rage, half supplication.

"A fine mess you've made of it between you, you and Bunny. I could have married Savarac in a minute—Bunny spoiled that. Savarac would have taken me even then if you hadn't come along."

"Who was Savarac?" he asked, a question which he had never before dared ask.

"Is that any of your business?" She glared toward her dressing table as if she might have hurled any of its toilet articles at his head. "Now will you go away? God, how I've paid for every cent you've given me—"

He reached out toward her, but she screamed and cringed.

"Don't you put your hands on me again. I don't think I've ever loathed anything as I have you. The touch of your hands, Ugh!"

He stood his ground, yet his knees were weakening. How easily he might have seized her little throat and smothered her under her pillow as an outraged Moor had done in an earlier, juster day. But because he could not be unkind to her he clenched his uncouth hands behind his back.

"What do you want me to do, Flora Lee?"

"Get out, just as fast as you can. I won't stay under your roof another night."

She made a struggle to arise, but he motioned her back with a gesture that was suddenly autocratic.

"You're not well enough to get up," he said coldly. "I won't bother you any more. You can have the house, if you want it. Or if not, there are two cars in the garage."

With that he left her, closing the door softly. When he quit the house, as he did almost immediately, he took nothing with him save his hat. He went out the back door, obscurely as the negroes do, and through the dusk he found his way to the Interurban Street Railway tracks. There he caught the next trolley into town.

He took it all in that dazed, quiet mood with which he recovered from our heaviest blows; for when our towers crumble they do not always come down with a great clatter of bricks—they often blow away like the bubbles that they are. From that last interview with the woman whom he had adored beyond reason he carried away but one vivid impression. His hands. She had never liked them to touch her.

The spectre called Savarac counted for little more than a symbol. O'Neill he hated and wished to kill. But that was for the future. But his hands. . . .

His head had stopped aching, but there was something he craved sharply. He must get drunk. That was it! Remembering a full quart of Scotch, concealed for him in the Pickwick Club, he went straight for it as soon as the trolley reached town.

But in the repressed air of the Pickwick Club he became saner, more cautious. Flora Lee, he considered, was a sick woman, and sick women say queer things. Bitterly as she had stabbed him—he could never again think of her as his wife—he shouldn't have gone away like that, leaving her to the servants and her own wild devices. And she had called after him when he closed the door.

No, he couldn't quit like that. He'd better telephone, he decided, and talk to her and give her another chance. But when he got a connection with his house he thought that Calvin's voice sounded curiously hard.

"Miss Flo Lee, huh?" he asked. "No, huh. She's gone out."

"Gone out? Where's she gone to?"

"She didn't say in particular, Miss Holt. But she went about ten minutes ago in the car."

"Alone?"

"No, huh, Miss Holt. With Miss O'Neill. I reckon."

Admah hung up the receiver and applied himself to the serious business of intoxication.

CHAPTER 76

The Pickwick Club made him sick. Everybody gathering around tables in little knots, passing their pocket flasks and laughing at him behind their hands. Hadn't a man a right to do as he pleased at his club? Was there any rule against a member's drinking alone if he wanted to? Everybody he knew, practically, had gone through that little room and taken a look at him. They thought he was drunk, likely as not. Well, he was. Any of their business? When Peebles had come along and made some bum excuses about wanting to take Admah home. What for? He'd never asked Wen to his house, and he was too late now. What a roar Flora Lee would put up if she saw Wen! Flora Lee. Shucks. . . .

The Pickwick Club made him sick. For a nickel he'd have put his foot through one of the windows. They wanted to drink like gentlemen. What for? There was no fun in drinking like a gentleman. You drink to be jolly, to warm up the cold place in your stomach. You drink to forget a lot of things. Gosh, what a lot of rum you need for that! People that drink like gentlemen made him sick.

The hat room boy waited noncommittally while Admah fumbled for his check. This being lost, the boy grinned and reckoned he knew Miss Holt's hat by the color of the band. He either found the hat or he didn't; Admah wasn't quite sure of that point, but he felt something on his head as he resumed his progress toward the door.

He managed it surprisingly well until the night air struck him in the face and he bumped into an evening-clad gentleman coming up the steps.

"Good evening, Holt." It was Colonel Atterbury.

Admah stood at the bottom of the steps, attempting to think of some pleasant reply to this pleasant salutation. But already the Colonel was walking up toward the clubhouse door, and the expression of his back was as secretive as the Principality's business policy. Admah wondered if he had noticed anything; then he laughed aloud at a splendid joke that seemed full armed out of his brain. Would you notice the new post-office building if it was on fire?

"Taxi, boss?"

A rufish colored man stood on the curb, gesturing toward a badly dented Ford. Silently Admah grinned.

"Whuh to, Kunnel?" The driver grinned with that understanding, somewhat envious expression which only an African can show to our moments of human weakness.

"Take me to the River," said Admah ponderously.

"Yassa, Kunnel. Which part o' the River, huh?"

"Wharf Number One." That was beautifully intoned.

"Yassa." The driver started his engine before he twisted around again. "Say, boss. They ain't no boat going out from Wharf Number One this time o' night."

"I don't want a boat," said Admah. "I want a wharf."

"Yassa, Kunnel."

By now Admah had reached the point of intoxication where one imagines one's self a being singled out by Bacchus to be immune from alcoholic poisoning. Cool and sober, in his own estimation, he lolled through the evening streets, philosophizing on the things that made him sick. Grand Avenue had turned itself into a little shoddy Broadway, electric light signs blinking on and off or twisting round like illuminated guitar snakes. All across the front of a movie palace a scare-eyed blonde in riding boots was guiding her fiery mount in a leap from cliff to cliff. Goofy's Radio Store was going full blast, something with a howl and a twang in it that sounded, in passing, like, "Ba-a-a-by, I got the twitchy-itchy hoola bla-a-a!" An Electrical Wizard had devoted his great mind to inventing those ear-splitting and eye-twitching and brain-addling. Well, they jolled people up, kept the poor old world from sticking in the mud. This last thought was refreshing.

Admah believed in advertising. Good thing, advertising. If he hadn't advertised, where would he be to-day? Where would he be? With a jerk of the car around a sharp corner he came to sufficiently to ask himself: Where was he now? His wife gone, his credit gone. What was it Flora Lee had said about his hands? She didn't like them to touch her. And that damned Frenchman—Sav—what was it—Savarac. . . . What sort of hands had he? Had Admah been like some terrible ape to her, annoying her with his caresses while she learned to smile like a doll? Like a doll? Like an angel? Something so shining, so far above him that he was flattered when she looked down on him to let him know that she felt his worship.

God! Why hadn't he killed O'Neill the first time he saw him leering at her over a glass-topped table?

The Ford stopped suddenly beside a deserted dock.

Between its gentle banks the River stole away, calm and melancholy beneath a sheet of stars. White men had first come downstream in canoes and rafts, like parasites that dwell on leaves they had been swirled against that bank to fasten on the living herbage and to multiply and to devour. Men had carved the River's banks to an ugly pattern of civilization and cities had polluted its waters; yet under the stars as Admah Holt crouched on the pier, lonely and depressed, he could feel the divinity of the stream, its power and its glory. He had been the River's child almost. His first memory was of a ride behind old John down to the ferry wharf on the other bank.

Fords Crashed at Bad Corner Last Evening

Two Ford cars driven by two prominent citizens crashed together at the corner of Peoria avenue and Third street last evening about 7:30 but neither of the drivers was injured. N. H. Jensen, prominent decorator, and William Rusch, equally prominent, but builder of radios, were the concerned parties. Bill was driving his Ford sedan west on Third street and had started to cross Peoria avenue when the Senator going north on Peoria avenue is said to have crashed into the front of Bill's car and turned it facing north.

The Senator was too much interested in other things and did not stop, and with the air filled with static.

Bill left his machine standing and beat all of Paavo Nurmi's recent records, overtaking the Senator and his Ford on First street. The Senator is reported to have expressed great surprise when notified of the damage he had done, but upon deeper thought, recalled that some one had struck him in the vicinity of the accident. Bill's car had to be towed away, suffering with a damaged wheel and other minor injuries.

SMOKE SCREEN DEATH

London—Steam and smoke from an engine, which enveloped a bridge while he was riding over it on a bicycle, caused William Pierce, a student, to ride into a motor car. He was killed.

LINCOLN PILGRIMAGE

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 12.—Five hundred members of the De Molay left here today by train for Springfield, Ill., on a pilgrimage to the tomb and home of Abraham Lincoln in observance of the 116th anniversary of the birth of the Civil War hero there. They expected to be joined by delegations from Chicago, Peoria, Kansas City and elsewhere.

FUND TO PROBE OYSTERS

Washington, Feb. 12.—A budget request for an appropriation of $25,000 to enable the department of commerce to determine whether oysters cause typhoid epidemics was forwarded today to Congress.

The South Central grade school basketball team finished its part of the annual grade school basketball tournament held at the Y with an unbroken string of victories for the championship of the grade schools. Their final game was with the North Central Thursday afternoon whom they defeated by a score of 29-4. The North Siders also have a perfect record, one of defeats, having lost every contest they have played. There was nothing particularly exciting about this last contest and the South Siders used all their subs spreading them throughout the game.

South Central—Wilson, Geisler, Vorhees, Dixon, forwards Starkey, Webb, Blackburn, Stitzel and Teeter. Guards.

North Central—Watkins and Feltes, forwards, Sullivan, c, Rorer, guard. Referee—Lair. Umpire—Glessner.

New Boxing Classes to be Organized this Eve

The new men's boxing class under the supervision of Harold Manning will hold its regular Friday evening session this evening from 7 to 9. This class is open to all members of the Y and all who plan on joining this class should report to Mr. Manning at 7 o'clock in the gym.

The Christians rolling 2266 against the Presbyterians 1953 in the Church Bowling tournament at the Y last evening put a strangle hold on the championship of the league. The Christians have bowled consistently throughout the tournament, having a full team present at all times and winning every match. They have grown ambitious and have achieved a match with the leading team in the Sterling Y tournament to be rolled at Sterling in the near future with a return match at Dixon during the month of March. A new schedule, whereby each church team will get a chance to roll each team in the Business Men's tournament is being prepared and will be announced in a day or so.

Ritola Stands Out as Nurmi's One Competitor

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 13.—(By The Associated Press)—Willie Ritola, Finnish American distance runner, stands out today more prominently than ever as the one competitor having a chance to stop the victorious march of Paavo Nurmi.

Competing in the feature events of the 100th Regiment indoor games last night, Ritola smashed Nurmi's two mile record after Paavo himself had sped to three new world's indoor marks in a race at one mile and a quarter that inaugurated another three night program for the Finn.

Ritola covered the two mile distance in the astonishing time of 9:03.45. Nurmi's record made last Saturday was 9:04.

Aubrey Shannon Moore, Pastor.
9:45 a. m. The Church School meets for Bible study. The attendance is increasing and the interest steadily deepening. There is a reason indeed. Come and see. You will find a class to your liking and will feel at home.
10:45 a. m. Morning worship. Sermon theme—God and Man looking at Men. Splendid musical numbers will be presented by the choir.
6:30 p. m. Epworth League hour for the young people. This is a most delightful hour with the young people in charge. Miss Marie Lentz will be the leader.
7:30 p. m. Evening worship. Sermon theme: "The Things We Fear." How old is fear? What is its origin? What is its effect upon the body, mind and spirit? Can it be cured?
The Young People's Chorus and a Male Quartet will furnish special musical numbers.
On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 7:30 o'clock in the Methodist church a series of popular religious addresses will be delivered by Dr. William R. Wedderspoon, of Chicago. Dr. Wedderspoon has been pastor of the St. James Episcopal church of Chicago for the past nine years having come to Chicago from Washington, D. C. where he served one of the most prominent churches in that city for a number of years. While in Washington he visited Dixon appearing upon the program at the Rock River Assembly. These lectures are delivered under the auspices of the Minister's Union of Dixon and are interdenominational in character. The public is most cordially invited to attend.

have entered school he will spend Sunday and part of each week with the local church. He preaches an interesting helpful sermon, one which is an inspiration for better living during the week.
The church is arranging for special services the latter part of March. Through the kindness of Dr. Merrill of our Home Missionary Society in Chicago, Dr. J. G. Brooks founder and former pastor of the church has been secured to assist Rev. Hale. Dr. Brooks needs no introduction to many of the people of Dixon. That we may gain the most from these services and be ready to do our part each member of the congregation is urged to attend every service between now and that time. Great things are expected for the "Little West Side Church."

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Bible study in the Church School at nine-thirty, J. F. Cox, Supt. Communion and worship immediately afterward. Sermon: "What Is Heaven Like?" The Y. P. S. C. E. prayer meeting at six-thirty considers the topic, "Striking Instances in the Friendliness of Jesus."
The sermon by the pastor at seven-thirty will be on the subject: "An evening with a Great Missionary." Paragraph sermon—Subject, "Common Honesty," text, "Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hands, the thing that is good." (Eph. 4:28) From the common thief to the "profiteer," there is a wide variety of dishonesty, but it is easily recognized, and rarely is it any harder to be aware of the guilt than it is to be aware of being a victim. We know whether we are honest or not. The remedy suggested by the Bible is simple: Quit. You may not be able to pay your debts at once. But a sincere effort and many recognition of the debt means much. To disavow a square obligation is to be a thief. "Better is a little, with righteousness, than great revenues with injustice." (Prov. 16:8).

I Sell the Flavor
—in Coffee

Flavor isn't an indefinite thing. It's a definite thing. The trouble is it hasn't been standardized.

Sugar, for example, is standardized. Every sugar contains the same amount of sweetness actually measured. But the beets or the cane that it comes from are a long way from standardized. One beet will have 8% of sugar and another will have 17%.

You'd hate like everything to pay the same price for beets and then try to get the sugar out yourself.

Perhaps this illustration of sugar will give you some idea of why there can be such a wide range in coffee.

It doesn't mean anything to buy coffee beans or ground coffee by the pound, unless you know how much coffee flavor they contain.

It is my business to see to it that when you buy Webb coffee you get 50 cups of full flavor to the pound. And when you get that you are paying the lowest price for coffee flavor that there is on the market.

The Broadening Soft Hat

When H. R. H., the Prince of Wales visited the United States last year for the international polo games, he wore a soft hat with an uncommonly full crown and wide brim. It was not especially becoming to him, but it was at once seen and seized upon as the forthcoming fashion by those who fancy that royal recommendation gives a style high-and-mighty authority. It is a curious contradiction that no country makes so much ado over a prince as much as a Republic, whereas in a kingdom he may go about with great freedom and little notice.

It is also odd that in England the Hair Apparent to the British throne is not looked upon as a national style leader, but as one of simple taste who wears just about what everybody else wears. In proof of this is the following excerpt from a well-known London gazette of fashion: "The Prince of Wales, of course, is well-liked at home, but there is no particular reason to go wild, as did the Americans, about his clothes, which do not differ from those of the average well-to-do young Englishman."

In point of fact, there are many Britons and some Americans who declare that the Prince is not a well-dressed man in the sense that he is careless about his clothes; wears any old thing or anything old and does not make enough changes in dress to show that he is keenly concerned about keeping up a smart appearance. Well, there are two types of people who can afford to disregard style in clothes—prince and plowboy. However, as somebody has aptly said, "Society is like a pie. The bottom is soggy; the top is brittle, but in between the top and bottom layers is the real stuff—the meat." That means you and me.

The sort of hat the Prince of Wales wore and, willy-nilly, has given a brisk vogue to in this country is reproduced here. Observe the full, tapering, crown creased through the center, but left undented at the sides. Notice, too, the very wide, scooped brim and the extra-deep ribbon. You will see this breezy shape much worn next Spring in tan, gray, blue-gray, green-gray, lavender-gray and kindred shades. Brim edges may be silk-bound or unbound; bands may be broad or narrow. Of course, the major consideration in selecting your soft hat is that it is proportioned to your head and flatters your face. All else is of minor consequence.

IN NEW YORK

New York—"Petticoat Inspection" is held at frequent intervals at one of the most exclusive girls' finishing schools in the east.

Now this school is attended by girls from some of the most prominent families in the country—ah, me, yes, by girls from some of the most "exclusive" families.

If you have an idea that these young ladies do nothing but frivolous goings on you are quite in error.

Here are some of the regulations at this particular school:

Every girl must wear three layers of clothing, including a petticoat. If she is found without a petticoat at "petticoat inspection" most of her few privileges are rescinded.

She may go to the theater only four times a year except in such instances as when the student body attends a play for purposes of study.

When visiting the theater she may attend only such plays as are on the censored list of the school.

She may go shopping only on permission of the principal. She must make out a list of purchases before going, any intended purchase—not contented by school authorities being stricken off the list.

Relatives and friends wishing to telephone or visit the girl must first make an appointment through the school office. If it is desired to accompany the girl from the school for any purpose the purpose of such an excursion must be stated.

That's just part of the code of conduct.

"It wouldn't be so bad," complained one of the young ladies, "if the school were in a more desirable location, but here we are in the Fifties, in the very center of the smartest section of New York, with all sorts of ducky affairs going on around us and we can't take part in them."

Fashion Note: Men's pajamas for spring are being shown in bright and variegated colors in the bath motif. On Fifth Avenue they are selling at $20 and $40 the suit.

Most of the hair-bobbing done here is behind screens or in private compartments. In a barber shop patronized by men and women the hair for the fair bobbers are screened from the rest of the shop. But in a second-story barber shop on Forty-second street the operation is performed in full view of the public. And the other evening I saw a fat lady in the chair of a barber shop while a gaping throng watched the scissors snip.

"Be ambitious," advises Walter Catlett in a musical comedy. "Be like the grapefruit. Once it was only a lemon but look where ambition took it."

MUZZLED "HOT DOGS"

Detroit (The Daily News)—"Hot dogs" have appeared here. First waffle batter is poured into a mold the shape of a large raw "dog." As it begins to brown, the "dog" is placed on a "cooking" water. Then another spoonful of batter completely encases the "dog." The "waffle dog" or the "barkless bark" is the result.

Up to date I have succeeded in keeping everything out of the newspapers. Mr. Santley has been a host within himself. He did everything necessary for me.

Of course, you can make any example of Jim that you wish. But I don't think the boy is a criminal. I wish I could influence you just a little toward giving him another chance. I hate to think what he will do if this is not given him.

If Leslie is well enough, perhaps you might come up for a day and fix things up for me. I assure you I do not know which way to turn.

Sincerely,
SALLY ATHERTON.

TOMORROW—Note left for Leslie Prescott by John Alden Prescott upon leaving for Pittsburg.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ALDEN DRAKE, formerly a sailor, grown soft and flabby through a life of idle ease, ships aboard the clipper Orientes as "boy," under the command of—

JAKE STEVENS, whose enmity he incurs because of a mutual love for—

MARY MANNING, daughter of the owner, who is a passenger. At Cape Town, Stevens is superseded as captain of the Orientes by Drake, whose in-laws have purchased the vessel during its cruise. Drake and Mary plan to enjoy an evening together in Cape Town, while the demoted Stevens is making the rounds of the barrooms. The infuriated ex-captain has asked for a five-minute "interview" with Drake. And searching for him, Drake is relieved to find that Stevens is drowning himself in liquor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Angry, sir, very angry," replied Twining with a grin.

"Liquor?"

"A little, sir."

Drake laughed, and thrust out his hand.

"You're a good fellow, Twining."

"I'm not sure I want to go out with anybody," she retorted. Her tone was irritable rather than angry.

"Captain Stevens was offensive when he returned. He upset me enough for one day."

Drake had dragged his sea-chest and bag into a small unused state-room, and answered her through the open door as he unlocked the chest.

"You can catch the mail tomorrow with the letters you have ready. We'll go past the Postoffice. A little run out to Green Point, a nice little dinner beside the sea, with music—Or would you prefer to run out to Rondebosch? That's a gorgeous suburb. Mary, all roses, rhododendrons, silver-leaf bushes and vineyards—"

"I haven't said I'm going anywhere," she retorted sharply.

"Perhaps, for the first time, we had better say Green Point," he went on, dragging out evening clothes and flinging them on the bunk. Her blue eyes flashed, and her red lips quivered, but he chattered on as if she only existed as something to do things for. "I haven't been out there since I was a 'Prentice kid. Corking place, though. Better start getting ready, if the letters are finished. No use going to a place for dinner after dinner's over."

"I won't be ordered about like this," she cried, angry at last.

She flounced into her cabin with a bang, and he whistled softly as he dressed.

A good dinner, a bottle of good wine and excellent music completed the work of bringing Mary back to normal. Drake helped, of course. He was out to enjoy himself and went to the limit. Mary was amazed at the infinite lights flashed by this man she had seen only as a very rough diamond except for that brief moment at his gate, which was not a meeting at all. Drake drank a good deal of wine; not more than would challenge lightly, when a waiter approached.

"Captain Drake, a man at the rear bar wants to speak to you."

"Can't he come here?" asked Drake, slightly annoyed. "Who is he?"

"I think he's one of your men from the ship, sir. He isn't—well, he's—" the man hesitated, but Drake understood. Whoever it might be was probably drunk.

"All right," he said, rising. "Excuse me, Mary. I'll be back in a minute."

He followed the waiter to the rear of the place. There was a bar which was used by drivers and underlings. A great noise was going on inside, mostly made by one man. And as Drake edged his way in, at the waiter's heels, he recognized the voice with a sharp tightening of his nerves.

In a moment he came face to face with Jake Stevens, as drunk as mixed liquor could make him, and rambling mad.

"That's the 'bully boy'!" roared Jake, lurching forward and walloping Drake heavily on the shoulder with an open hand. "Tried to dodge me, hey? Tried to choose me out 'n' minutes conv's'rhun. I'm going to break 'y' into 101 bits 'n' stuff 'y' down a sewer! I'm goin' to—"

Drake seized him by the arm and hauled him sharply to the door, while the crowd followed gleefully.

CHAPTER XIV
Red War!

A BOISTEROUS miner, just down from diggings with a full belt, elected himself bottle holder to Drake. He hauled his man to his feet, peering hard at his bleeding face.

"You ain't hurt," he decided. "You're a bleeder, that's all. Now you play fer his pantry, old genelman. Hit him where he stows his bones. That's what'll sink him. Watch him now!"

Stevens crouched and rushed as soon as Drake stood clear. The crowd formed a circle, and the howling ceased as the fighters came together. Drake made no effort to avoid Jake's rush, other than to duck his head under the terrific lead that went over him with a round arm swing. As their bodies crashed together, he drove right and left into Jake's stomach with every ounce of power and every bit of spring in his body. Jake sat down with a "whoof" and an "oomph!"

The crowd roared again. Two of them dragged Jake Stevens to his feet, and one gave him a swing of raw rope. Drake's second poured raw spirit into the bleeding gash on his cheek, and the pain almost maddened him. When Stevens rushed again, fired with fresh courage and ferocity from the run, Drake jumped to meet him, gitting his teeth and swearing with agony. There was a fierce flurry of fists. Drake tottered backward under the impact of a punch that all but loosened his head from his spine, and Stevens plunged headlong after him, snorting and grunting, swinging a fist in either flat.

Drake dodged the rush, recovering only in time to sidestep; then he half turned, swung a right with his weight behind it full upon Stevens' ear as he roared past, and that was the end so far as Mister Jake Stevens was concerned. Jake lay in the bushes where he fell, neglected even by his seconds, while every roaring ruffian bawled proffers of drinks to the victor.

"Let me get a wash," said Drake, ducking through the crowd at the heels of his second. "Can't you look after Jake? I'm all right. He's out. No, I don't want a drink, thanks."

all keyed up for a gorgeous bit of sport. The licking of a dress suit broke was always good for a crowd. Stevens lurched along behind Drake, cursing horribly, beating at the strong grip that towed him faster than his unsteady feet wanted to travel. His eyes were almost hidden under scowling brows; his face was swollen and purple with blood; his big strong hands were scarred and bleeding as if he had already tried his fists out on somebody else. Right behind him lurched another seaman, perhaps the master of the white barque.

Outside the door, still in the radius of light from the bar windows, Drake straightened Stevens up and shook him.

"Mister Stevens, you are a disgrace to your ship! You will go back to Cape Town and go aboard the ship at once. You hear me?"

"Think to th' bloody stowaway dude!" cackled Stevens, turning for approval to his companion, who had subsided into a thick bush of shrubbery as soon as he ceased moving ahead.

"Nuther good man gone wrong," Stevens said, sagely. Then he turned ferociously upon Drake and shook his hand off.

"They wouldn't let me come up to join you an' Mary, so I got 'em to fetch you down," he said. "You stole my girl, you dirty rat! You stole my ship, you little bit o'—"

"That's enough, Stevens! Are you going aboard?"

"Yes, by God! So are you, on a shuter!"

Jake swung a terrific right fist which split Drake's cheek like a knife splits a ripe mango, and hurled him headlong into the bush where Jake's companion snored unceasingly.

ANNUAL MEETING LINCOLN HIWAY IS HELD IN DETROIT

J. Newton Gunn of N. Y.
Reelected President of Association.

Detroit, Mich.—J. Newton Gunn of New York City was reelected President of the Lincoln Highway Association at the Annual Meeting of the Board of Directors held here last week. Mr. Gunn has already served the association as President for four years, having succeeded F. A. Sieberling of Akron, Ohio, January 1st, 1921.

The other officers of the Association elected by unanimous vote at the recent meeting, are: Vice Presidents: F. A. Sieberling, Roy D. Chapin, Carl G. Fisher, Henry E. Joy, A. F. Bement; Secretary, Gail S. Hoag; Treasurer, Emory W. Clark.

Thus the officers of the past four years retain their posts, with the exception of A. F. Bement of Detroit, who for the past ten years has been both a Vice President and Secretary and who resigned the post of Secretary effective January 1st, 1925.

Mr. Bement, who for eleven years has devoted his entire time to the work of the association, has now organized a national advertising agency known as Austin P. Bement Inc., with headquarters in Detroit. G. S. Hoag, since 1920 Field Secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, was elected Secretary, succeeding Bement, who was one of the Association's Vice Presidents and continued on the Board of Directors.

G. S. Hoag, who assumed the post vacated through the tragic death of Field Secretary H. C. Ostermann in 1920, has had a very thorough training in the Association's work during the past five years and is excellently equipped to step into Bement's shoes and carry on the work originally.

Doctors and good pharmacists know that Cod Liver Oil is full of vitalizing vitamins that make flesh, create appetite, restore vigor, build up the power to resist disease and chase away nervousness.

But it's horrible tasting stuff and every day fewer people are taking it for doctors are prescribing and the people are fast learning that they can get better results with McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, which Rowland's Pharmacy, Dixon and Rochelle, and druggists all over the country are having a tremendous demand for.

It is a wonderful upbuilding medicine for skinny, backward children, especially after sickness and 60 tablets only cost 60 cents.

One woman gained 10 pounds in 22 days and if any skinny man or woman can't put on 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist will gladly return the purchase price.

But be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine. Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.—Adv.

Was She a Fool?

To satisfy her parents, Evelyn became engaged to Eugene. But she was not happy. In her eyes, Eugene was too perfect, too gentle and too good. The ideal lover she dreamed of had in him something of the savage. She pictured him big, virile, muscular, brave. That in the black, frown-wrinkled face of a devil, disguised as Evelyn's ideal of a "man," came into her life. Followed a drama of elemental passion, fierce hate and fierce love that was to test Eugene's manhood to the limit and try Evelyn's very soul. The outcome is as thrilling as its unexpected. Evelyn tells the story under the title of "The Primitive Lover." Read it in True Story Magazine for March.

THE SPARK PLUG
Vitamins to nourishment are what a spark-plug is to a motor. To sustain vitality, the body needs three thousand calories of food daily, yet if this food is not activated by vitamins the body is unable to thrive in health or strength.

Scott's Emulsion brings to a weakened system vitamin-activated nourishment of highest degree. A little taken regularly helps wonderfully to build strength and resistance.

If you would keep strong and vital—activate your diet with Scott's Emulsion.

ly undertaken by the late A. R. Parkinson in 1913.

It was the consensus of opinion of the Board that the services of a Field Secretary were no longer required in view of the status the work has reached. The Lincoln Highway has reached virtual completion in so many of the states traversed between New York and San Francisco that the remaining points requiring frequent personal contact and attention on the part of one of the Association's officials are widely scattered and can be reached more economically when necessary by rail.

Mr. Hoag has made ten trips back and forth across the continent on the Lincoln Way during the past five years in the Association's official Packard Pathfinder. He will hereafter spend the larger part of his time at the Detroit headquarters. One rapid tour across the continent each year, it is expected, will enable Secretary Hoag to take care of the pressing situations requiring his personal presence. Instead of spending eight months behind the wheel, as in the past, no doubt six or eight weeks will suffice him to inspect the route in the future. This will materially reduce the Association's annual expense.

Board Increased to Seventeen
At the meeting of the active members preceding the meeting of the Board, the old Board of Directors, numbering sixteen members, was reelected unanimously and, in addition a new board member was added in the person of E. S. Evans, President of E. S. Evans & Co. Inc., automobile loading experts, with headquarters in Detroit.

Mr. Evans has been keenly interested in the development of American highways for many years. He accompanied Vice-President Bement on several transcontinental trips along the Lincoln Way in past years and is a founder of the association. His election to the Board comes as signal honor after many years of personal effort and long study of Lincoln Highway problems.

Reports presented to the Board by the Vice-President and the Field Secretary indicated gratifying progress in 1924 in all states except Utah. The outlook for 1925 construction is particularly promising, unusual progress being anticipated in Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Nevada. Detailed figures as to construction completed on the route during 1924 are not yet available but incomplete tabulation of returns from the various state and county highway departments indicate an expenditure for new construction and maintenance last year approximating $7,000,000.

Broader Field of Educational Effort Stressed
The Board dwelt at length upon the future extension of the Association's educational efforts in co-operation with foreign highway associations and also spent much time in considering the detailed plans for the development of the Ideal Campaign in which Edsel B. Ford of the Association's Board is particularly interested.

Many of the Association's founders were guests at the banquet following the board meeting and noted with interest many lantern slides which were presented showing progress of construction in the various states.

The Association's financial position was considered sound with reserves in surplus and special funds amounting to over $75,000. It was pointed out by the executive officers of the Association that a greater support must be had in the future from along the route. The communities along the Lincoln Highway which have profited largely from the work of the organization have not been supporting the work financially as they should have been during the past two or three years and special efforts will be made during 1925 to bring this support back to what the Board considers to be a rightful share of the expense to be borne by Lincoln Highway communities.

Former Army Aviators Called Before Committee
Washington, Feb. 12.—The House aircraft committee opened another chapter today in the hearings which have stirred up army and navy circles by calling a number of former army fliers who served in France with Brig. Gen. Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service, and central figure in the present controversy.

General Mitchell himself was summoned to reappear before the committee after the other witnesses to reply to recent charges before the committee by Captain A. W. Johnson, assistant naval air chief, that the general had disobeyed orders during the 1921 bombing tests off the Virginia capes.

ly undertaken by the late A. R. Parkinson in 1913.

It was the consensus of opinion of the Board that the services of a Field Secretary were no longer required in view of the status the work has reached. The Lincoln Highway has reached virtual completion in so many of the states traversed between New York and San Francisco that the remaining points requiring frequent personal contact and attention on the part of one of the Association's officials are widely scattered and can be reached more economically when necessary by rail.

Mr. Hoag has made ten trips back and forth across the continent on the Lincoln Way during the past five years in the Association's official Packard Pathfinder. He will hereafter spend the larger part of his time at the Detroit headquarters. One rapid tour across the continent each year, it is expected, will enable Secretary Hoag to take care of the pressing situations requiring his personal presence. Instead of spending eight months behind the wheel, as in the past, no doubt six or eight weeks will suffice him to inspect the route in the future. This will materially reduce the Association's annual expense.

Board Increased to Seventeen
At the meeting of the active members preceding the meeting of the Board, the old Board of Directors, numbering sixteen members, was reelected unanimously and, in addition a new board member was added in the person of E. S. Evans, President of E. S. Evans & Co. Inc., automobile loading experts, with headquarters in Detroit.

Mr. Evans has been keenly interested in the development of American highways for many years. He accompanied Vice-President Bement on several transcontinental trips along the Lincoln Way in past years and is a founder of the association. His election to the Board comes as signal honor after many years of personal effort and long study of Lincoln Highway problems.

Reports presented to the Board by the Vice-President and the Field Secretary indicated gratifying progress in 1924 in all states except Utah. The outlook for 1925 construction is particularly promising, unusual progress being anticipated in Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Nevada. Detailed figures as to construction completed on the route during 1924 are not yet available but incomplete tabulation of returns from the various state and county highway departments indicate an expenditure for new construction and maintenance last year approximating $7,000,000.

Broader Field of Educational Effort Stressed
The Board dwelt at length upon the future extension of the Association's educational efforts in co-operation with foreign highway associations and also spent much time in considering the detailed plans for the development of the Ideal Campaign in which Edsel B. Ford of the Association's Board is particularly interested.

Many of the Association's founders were guests at the banquet following the board meeting and noted with interest many lantern slides which were presented showing progress of construction in the various states.

The Association's financial position was considered sound with reserves in surplus and special funds amounting to over $75,000. It was pointed out by the executive officers of the Association that a greater support must be had in the future from along the route. The communities along the Lincoln Highway which have profited largely from the work of the organization have not been supporting the work financially as they should have been during the past two or three years and special efforts will be made during 1925 to bring this support back to what the Board considers to be a rightful share of the expense to be borne by Lincoln Highway communities.

Former Army Aviators Called Before Committee
Washington, Feb. 12.—The House aircraft committee opened another chapter today in the hearings which have stirred up army and navy circles by calling a number of former army fliers who served in France with Brig. Gen. Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service, and central figure in the present controversy.

General Mitchell himself was summoned to reappear before the committee after the other witnesses to reply to recent charges before the committee by Captain A. W. Johnson, assistant naval air chief, that the general had disobeyed orders during the 1921 bombing tests off the Virginia capes.
